

James A. Klein is President of the American Benefits Council, a trade association based in Washington, D.C. representing primarily large employers. Its members sponsor or administer health and retirement benefits covering millions of Americans.

Jim serves on the Corporate Board and the Government Liaison Committee of the International Foundation of Employee Benefit Plans. Jim travels extensively internationally advising public officials and private sector representatives on the development of retirement and health care systems. He appears frequently in the national and benefits media commenting on health and retirement policy developments.

Jim previously was Manager of Pension and Health Care Policy for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, and before that practiced law for a Washington, D.C. firm specializing in employee benefits and worked as a Congressional legislative assistant. Jim graduated magna cum laude from Tufts University with a degree in Bioethics and graduated with honors from George Washington University School of Law.