

Adam Laughton is a senior associate in the Corporate department of Seyfarth Shaw LLP's Houston office. His practice focuses on providers and entrepreneurs in the healthcare industry.

Mr. Laughton has served many types of providers within the healthcare system, including facilities, physicians and other professionals, and ancillary service providers such as pharmacies and laboratories. He also works with start-up ventures, entrepreneurial individuals and groups, and provider joint ventures. He has been responsible for a wide variety of matters, including mergers and acquisitions among providers and facilities, False Claims Act litigation, regulatory and compliance counseling and reimbursement disputes and appeals.

During law school, Mr. Laughton served as a clerk for Chief Justice Christine M. Durham of the Utah Supreme Court. He spent two years during college as a volunteer missionary in Mexico and is fluent in Spanish. Mr. Laughton serves as a member of the Houston chapter of the Duke Alumni Admissions Advisory Committee and the Houston Election Protection Leadership Council under the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law.