Co-founder and President
HealthNEXT

Raymond J. Fabius, MD, CPE, FACPE serves currently as Co-founder and President of HealthNEXT – the emerging leader in building Cultures of Health. Prior to this role, Dr. Fabius held the position of Chief Medical Officer for Truven Health Analytics (now part of IBM Watson Health), and there identified eight companies out of over 250 large employers that had solved their health care cost issues by fostering a culture of health, safety and wellbeing. Dr. Fabius and his startup spent the better part of two years studying these benchmark employer efforts to shape a greater understanding of “what it takes” to accomplish this. The cutting-edge research uncovered over 200 action items that organizations can deploy to create a corporate culture of health. It also determined that best practice performance requires at least 140 of them to be implemented with rigor and metrics to achieve a sustainably flat health care cost curve as well as enhance organizational performance.
